THE IDEAL KITCHEN.

Is It Electricity Takes the Place of Wood and Coal.

The remark was made recently by a housekeeper, that when the last bucket of coal for heating and cooking purposes had been brought into the house and the last bucket of ashes carried out, she should feel that the millennium had arrived. This remark was called forth by a conversation on the subject of the use of gas and electricity in place of coal. The former is used in many kitchens with great satisfaction, but the latter, as yet, is too expensive for common use and requires special attachments for using.

This Utopia looked forward to by this lady has been realized in some instances even now, and is an actuality. All of the cooking in the Minnesota club house, at St. Paul, is done by electricity, and the members are enthusiastic over the superior manner in which electric heat does the work. The heat being distributed evenly in the various utensils, the cooking is evenly done and the flavors retained, while the inconvenience is reduced to a minimum.

George Foster Peabody, of Brooklyn, N. Y., has dispensed with coal entirely, and all household operations are now performed by electricity. The house is lighted by electricity, warmed by electric heaters, and cooled in summer by electric fans; the cooking is done and all water heated by electricity, and the work of ironing is rendered easy by the use of electric irons, no longer "sad." Whenever power is needed, electric motors are employed, as for running a sewing machine or in laundry operations.

HANDKERCHIEF CASE.

A New Design Made of Birch Bark and Colored Ribbon.

A very novel handkerchief case can be made of birch bark. It will require six strips twelve inches long, and twelve six inches long. Weave these in and out, basket fashion. Line with silk over a layer of scented wadding,

NEAT HANDKERCHIEF CASE.

and turn one corner back, fastening it with a bow of ribbon. The whole case is to be bound with narrow ribbons, which may be stitched on. Pink, blue or yellow form pleasing contrasts with the silvery grays and soft browns of the bark. Inch-wide satin ribbon, of contrasting colors, can be woven in like manner. Olive and pink are especially pretty, as are also golden brown and yellow.—American Agriculturist.

To Preserve Quinces.

Pare, quarter and core the quinces and throw them into cold water. Save the parings and knotty pieces for jelly, being careful to reject the cores and seeds, as they prevent the liquid from jellifying. When you have pared sufficient to make one or two jars, take them from the water and put into the preserving kettle; cover with boiling water, bring to a boil quickly, then stand on the back of the range, where they will cook slowly, until they can be pierced with a straw. While they are cooking, put the sugar and some water into another kettle, allowing one-half pound of sugar and a half pint of water for each pound of fruit. Stir the sugar until dissolved, then boil and skim. Lift the quinces from the water and put them into the syrup and cook slowly for ten minutes, and can. If several jars are to be canned, all the fruit should be boiled in the same water, and this water saved to boil the skins for jelly.

How to Clean Blankets.

Various methods of cleansing blankets appear in the newspapers with periodical regularity. Among them the following has the merit of being probably the least taxing to the physical strength and the most economical of any and at the same time equal to any in efficacy: Pour into the tub half a pint of common household ammonia, laying the blanket lightly over it, and immediately pour in enough warm water to entirely cover the blanket. This sends the fumes of the ammonia through the fibers of the wool and loosens the dirt in a way which seems little short of marvelous. The blankets should then be pressed and stirred about with a stick till the water seems to have acquired its darkest hue, when a second tub of clear water of about the same temperature as the first should be used in the same way, after which the blanket should be run lightly through the wringer and hung out to dry.

Rose Sachets for Drawers.

To perfume bureau drawers rose sachets are most desirable. They may be made of cheese cloth or any thin material, in cream or white, tied with narrow bright ribbons, or colors in harmony with the toilet draperies can be chosen. In size the sachets should not exceed six inches in length and four in width. Fill them with petals freshly gathered, as such a small quantity will not need drying, the air circulating freely through and around them. They may be refilled several times during the season. It is much better to enclose the leaves in this way than to scatter them loosely through the drawers as is frequently done, for when they wither and dry up the result is not pleasing.—Margaret D. Brown, in American Farmer.

Johnny's New Friend.

Little Johnny—I got 'quainted with a nice little boy to-day. He likes to go to school ever so much, and he loves his teacher, and his face is always clean.

Mother—I am glad you like him. "And he hardly ever misses his lessons, and he studies like everything."

"He is a good boy."

"And he's polite to everybody, and always lifts his hat to the minister."

"I hope you will learn from him."

"Yes'm. He's gettin' up a Boys' Readin' and Smokin' club! May I join?"—Good News.

The Ones in Danger.

"The robbers have got a good start, but the detectives are after them."

"Who? The detectives?"

"No. The robbers."

"Yes, but the detectives are better mounted."

"Hm! Well, they'll escape."

"Who? The robbers?"

"No. The detectives."—Chicago Tribune.

An Important Occasion.

Uncle Ebony—I's glad you's in, sah, 'cause I want to borrow youah cyclopedias, and a few dictionaries, and any other nice big books you can spare, sah.

Employer—Goodness me! And you've brought a wheelbarrow, I see. What on earth do you want of them?

Uncle Ebony—Very important occasion, sah, very important. Dinah and me wants to hunt up a name for the baby, sah.—N. Y. Weekly.

Poor Consolation.

"Really, my dear," said poor Mr. Pecked to his better half, "you have sadly disappointed me. I once considered you a jewel of a woman, but you've turned out only a bit of matrimonial paste."

"Then, my love," was the reply, "console yourself with the idea that paste is very adhesive, and will stick to you as long as you live."—Boston Globe.

Not Her Fault.

"I don't see why it takes Bertie so long to learn to talk," said the young mother, anxiously. "I spend hours every day trying to teach him. Bress his 'little footsy-tootsies! Doesn't muzzer deess do ever'sing she tan to det it to talky-walky! Tum to its muzzer! Popsy-wopsy doney duckums! Widdlecome biddlecome fiddle-de-dee! Toze its pitty 'tittle eyes now and go 'sleepy!"

—Chicago Tribune.

The Arrow.

I shot an arrow into the air:
It fell to earth, I know not where;
But I soon found out, I'm sorry to say—
It had killed a horse, and I had to pay.

—Truth.

FOUND OUT TOO LATE.

Rambling Willie—I'd never have believed that of ole Swipsey. He died last week wid water on de brain.

Stale Mufins—An' to tink dat we once recognized dat feller as a fren'! It's too much, Willie.—Judge.

A Creditor's Philosophy.

I'm glad Smythe never paid me back 'The River lent in day, I'm sure. Because, had he done so, perchance, I might have lent him many more.

—Harper's Bazar.

Spiteful.

"I'm six and you are only four," said Bessie, loftily, to her little sister Belle, and then added in a still more aggravating tone, "and when I was four you were only two, and when I was two you were nothing but dust."

"Yes," retorted Belle, spitefully, "and if I'd been a mud puddle I'd splashed you, so I would."—Harper's Young People.

That Settled It.

Laurence—Bertie Bashwood is engaged to that pretty widow he's been attentive to so long.

Torrence—That so? I never thought he'd get his courage up.

Laurence—Guess she thought so too; and last time they went with a party down to Manhattan, when they came to the tunnel she hollered "Ouch!"—Judge.

A Probability.

She (wearily)—Yes, I'm engaged to three men, and they have each of them given me a ring.

He—What if all three should happen to call on you at the same time?

She—Why, then, I'm afraid there would be a circus with three rings in it.—Brooklyn Life.

Discouraging to Reggie.

She—You know, Reggie, that girls are being called by the names of flowers now, and my sister suggested that I should be called Thistle.

Reggie—O, yes, I see; because you are so sharp.

She—O no; she said it was because a donkey loved me.—Boston Globe.

Fashion Note.

Mr. Upper crust (to his son)—I say, Charles, why don't you wear your dress suit?

Charles—Not much. The last time I wore my dress suit at a party a young lady offered me to bring her a cup of coffee and be quick about it.—Texas Sittings.

In the Old Days.

Belle—I was supremely happy the day I was sixteen.

Blanche—No doubt. I've always insisted that the last generation enjoyed themselves much more than the present.—N. Y. Sun.
